

NON-FICTION TEXT – RECOUNT – WRITING TO INFORM & ENTERTAIN

Recount text is the retelling of events that have actually happened: in the first person if it is a personal recount in the third person if recounting events that have happened to others.

Purpose	Common examples of text type	Generic Text Structure / Language Features
To provide an account of events in an interesting and engaging way. Recounts can be combined with other text types, for example, newspaper reports, often consist of a recount that includes elements of explanation.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Retelling stories in English as well as in other curriculum areas such as RE, History or Science</li> <li>• Giving accounts of educational visits, science experiments or sporting events</li> <li>• Writing biographies and autobiographies</li> <li>• Letters and postcards</li> <li>• Diaries and journals</li> <li>• Newspaper reports</li> <li>• Encyclopaedia entries</li> <li>• Biography/Autobiography</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Clear beginning, middle and end in chronological order</li> <li>• A strong opening (paragraph in KS2) to hook the reader (often includes Who? What? Where? Why? When?)</li> <li>• Paragraphs often begin with a topic sentence</li> <li>• Orientation such as scene-setting or establishing context (It was the school holidays. I went to the park..)</li> <li>• Time sentence signposts for coherence that become more complex as children get older e.g. First, next, then progressing to more complex fronted adverbials.</li> <li>• Some additional detail about each event (He was surprised to see me.)</li> <li>• Reorientation, e.g. a closing statement that may include elaboration. (I hope I can go to the park again next week. It was fun.)</li> <li>• Past tense</li> <li>• Often written in the first or third person</li> <li>• Structure sometimes reorganises the chronology of events using techniques such as flashbacks, moving the focus backwards and forwards in time, but these strategies are more often used in fiction recounts.</li> </ul>
